Editorial

ALTHOUGH we heartily agree with the sentiment expressed by the old writer who said that "Editorials are tiresome," yet they have often-times been found useful. As a means of anticipating criticism by apologies thereby offered, they have been long held in esteem by the editors of such a publication as this. Since, moreover, it cannot be said that the writing of editorials is "a custom more honored in the breach than in the observance," we must follow suit with a few words, which, it is hoped, may stimulate the charitable impulses of the reader to glance over the succeeding pages.

Every class, as it finds the responsibility of putting out an annual resting upon it, has ideas as to what is meant by such a book. As the means by which such ideas are set forth, the editorial holds an important place.

We believe an annual performs at least three functions.

First. The college has a right to expect a book which may be a worthy representative of her before the public.

Second. The Alumni looks to it as a means by which they may keep in touch with their Alma Mater.

Third. The under-graduates hope for a book which may serve in the present as an efficient criterion of the college year, and in the future may be a memento of their college life.

These we believe to be the purposes of an annual, and we take pleasure in placing in your hands another Ivy, with the hope that it may succeed in satisfying all that is looked for in such a book.

We express our sincere thanks to all who have in anyway assisted us in the compilation of this Ivy.

Trinity College

Hartford, Conn.

THIS college was chartered by the State of Connecticut in 1823. Its first class was graduated in 1827. It was founded by Episcopalians under the leadership of the Right Rev. Thomas Church Brownell, and has been fostered especially by members of that communion, but it is governed by a self-perpetuating Board of Trustees not under ecclesiastical control. While attached to the interests of its church, it is not sectarian. It has included among its students men of every faith. It is a generously equipped secular institution, religious in spirit and motives, but not ecclesiastical. It gives its advantages to all properly qualified candidates, irrespective of religious affiliations.

The corps of instruction consists of eleven professors, five lecturers, seven instructors and a librarian.

Courses of Instruction

The college offers four courses of instruction, viz.:

- I. A COURSE IN ARTS. *
- II. A COURSE IN LETTERS AND SCIENCE.
- III. A COURSE IN SCIENCE.
- IV. A COURSE IN LETTERS.

The courses extend over four years. Students completing the Course in Arts receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Students completing the Course in Letters and Science or the Course in Science receive the degree of Bachelor of Science, and those completing the Course in Letters receive the degree of Bachelor of Letters.

Students who do not propose to pursue all the studies of any of the regular courses may be permitted, under the name of special students, to attend any class in such studies as, upon examination, they are found qualified to pursue. Upon honorable dismissal, they are entitled to a certificate from the President, stating the studies which they have pursued. In certain departments the College offers also instruction for graduate students. The departments of instruction in the College number twenty-four, including eighty-two elective and voluntary courses.

The Principle of Instruction

The number of the teaching force, large relatively to the number of those taught, admits of a close relation between instructors and students. Each student is held accountable for his work every day, and receives personal encouragement and guidance in a degree impossible where the number of the taught is greater. Practical research and laboratory methods are applied wherever possible.

The Library

The College Library, numbering 40,000 volumes, is under the superintendence of a professional librarian, who guides the students in the use of books. They have also at their command the Watkinson Reference Library of 50,000 volumes, the Library of the Connecticut Historical Society, and the Hartford Public Library, with its well-stocked reading rooms.

Laboratories and Observatory

The Jarvis Physical Laboratory contains in addition to the lecture and apparatus rooms, a large laboratory for work in the elementary courses, a reference library and several smaller laboratories adapted and devoted to advanced work of a special character. The laboratory has a very complete equipment for work in all the branches of Physics. Special attention has been given to making the facilities for work in electricity as complete as possible. The department is provided with standard apparatus for electrical measurements, and has a workshop, steam engine and direct current and polyphase alternating current generators for its special use. The Jarvis Chemical Laboratory is well equipped for work in general experimental and organic chemistry, in qualitative and quantitative analysis, and in assaying and gas analysis.

The main laboratory has desk space for thirty students working at one time. This room is devoted to work in general experimental chemistry and qualitative analysis. For work in quantitative analysis and organic chemistry separate laboratories are provided and properly equipped. A room set apart for assaying is fitted up with suitable furnaces and other necessary material.

The new Hall of Natural History contains biological, botanical, geological and mineralogical laboratories provided with every modern equipment.

The Observatory contains a six and a half inch refractor, a two and a half inch transit, a standard clock, a chronograph, a smaller refractor, a portable transit, a sextant, and conveniences for the simpler work in astronomical photography.

Gymnasium and Athletic Field

A Gymnasium is supplied with the best apparatus, in the use of which the students are trained by a special instructor. An Athletic Field on the college grounds is to be extended and perfected at an expense of $10,000, contributed by friends and alumni of the College.

Fellowships, Scholarships and Prizes

The Russell Fellowship, yielding about $400, is awarded biennially to a member of the graduating class, of superior ability, who engages to pursue an approved course of graduate study at Trinity College or at some foreign university. The Holland Scholarships, each having an annual value of $600, are awarded to the students attaining the highest rank in the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes respectively. Prizes of the aggregate value of $490 are awarded in the several departments.

Expenses

The amount of the Treasurer's bills each year varies from $177.50 to $242.50. Board can be obtained at $3.50 a week and upwards, making the cost of board for thirty-seven weeks at the lowest rate $129.50. The amount of the Treasurer's bills can be reduced to holders of beneficiary scholarships of which there are more than fifty.

Situation

The buildings of the college are situated on a site commanding beautiful views in the south part of Hartford, itself one of the most beautiful cities of New England. The largest of the buildings, more than 600 feet in length, intended to form the west side of a great quadrangle, is of stone in the English secular gothic style, and is one of the most notable collegiate buildings of the country. The Jarvis Laboratories, the Hall of Natural History and the Gymnasium, are tasteful and commodious structures of brick. Four of the college fraternities have special chapter houses.

For catalogues apply to the President or to the Secretary of the Faculty.

The Opening of the Hall of Natural History

THE most important academic event of the last five years was undoubtedly the opening of the new Hall of Natural History, which took place on the seventh of December last.

When ground was broken for the building in the Summer of 1899, hopes were entertained that it might be finished by the next Commencement, so that larger numbers of the Alumni might be present than would otherwise be possible, but plans miscarried, so that it was not till the Autumn following that a sufficient state of completion was reached to warrant a formal opening. The date chosen, however, proved a most auspicious one, for seldom has Alumni Hall contained such a throng as that in attendance, or the College walk presented so crowded an appearance as during the afternoon of the eventful day.

The ceremonies were of an extremely interesting nature. At two o'clock the invited guests and Faculty, preceded by the college marshal, moved in procession from the Gymnasium, where lunch had been served, to the hall above, and took their seats upon the stage, which had been greatly enlarged for the occasion. The exercises were opened with prayer by the Rt. Rev. William W. Miles, Bishop of New Hampshire, after which President Smith delivered an address of welcome, with a short sketch of Trinity's past record in the field of natural science. Prof. Edwards, the head of the Department of Biology, next read a few extracts from letters received by him from prominent naturalists all over the world, representing the important universities and scientific societies of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Russia, Norway, Austria, Japan and Mexico. The character of these communications was significant; far from being mere formal regrets and acknowledgements, they showed real enthusiasm and interest in the exceptional facilities which were here to be offered to American students for advanced work in natural history.

After a selection by the Glee Club, the first of the two principal addresses of the afternoon was delivered by William H. Howell, Ph.D., M.D., Professor of Physiology and Dean of the Medical Faculty at Johns Hopkins University. The subject, "Biology as an Element in College Training," was one which could not fail to be attractive, to the students in particular, and proved to be of the greatest practical value. Prof. Henry F. Osborn, Sc.D., of Columbia University, Curator of Vertebrate Palaeontology in the American Museum of Natural History, next spoke on "The Progress of Vertebrate Palaeontology in the United States," illustrating his address with numerous lantern slides. These, as well as the literary part of the lecture, were very interesting both to the tyros and to the more advanced biologists in the audience. Indeed both the chief addresses were of the highest order, and furnished a scientific treat long to be remembered by those fortunate enough to gain standing room in the hall.

"A True and Circumstantial Account of the Celebrated Fight Between the Ichthyosaurus and the Plesiosaurus," written by C. E. Woodman, '73, was next sung by the Glee Club with great effect, after which President Hadley, of Yale; President Carter, of Williams; Professor Conn, of Wesleyan, and Doctor Pynchon, of Trinity, made brief addresses of congratulation and good wishes. At their conclusion, President Smith formally announced that the Hall of Natural History was ready for use, and open to the inspection of the public, so, after the Benediction had been pronounced by Bishop White, of Indiana, in the absence of Bishop Potter, of New York, the procession re-formed and proceeded to the newly dedicated building.

Very impressive was the long line composed of guests, Faculty, students by classes, and townspeople, as it moved slowly along the walk in the gathering twilight, the Glee Club and everyone who could join in singing "Neath the Elms." Even when one end began to be swallowed up by the brightly illuminated Hall of Natural History, the other had not yet emerged from the Gymnasium; indeed, the capacious Museum and lecture rooms could scarcely contain the throng that congregated for the informal reception which was held between five and seven, giving everyone an opportunity to meet the distinguished guests of the occasion, and to see the points of interest about the building, under the guidance of volunteer student ushers. To the departing visitors the college, with its long series of illuminated windows, shutting in the campus on three sides, presented a striking appearance and created a remarkable impression of size and grandeur.

So ended the day which must be memorable as long as the Hall itself endures. The College, Professors, and students, alike may well be proud of what was accomplished on this occasion, and have good reason to expect that the building so successfully opened, may be of lasting benefit to the institution of which they are members, and to the community which it honors.

HALL OF NATURAL HISTORY

'Neath the Elms

'Neath the elms of our old Trinity,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity,
No more shall we meet,
Our classmates to greet,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.

CHORUS—'Neath the elms of our old Trinity,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity,
Oh, it's seldom we'll meet in the moonlight so sweet,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.

On the hills of our old Trinity,
In the halls of our old Trinity,
There is right merry cheer,
There are friends true and dear,
In the halls of our old Trinity.

College days are from care and sorrow free,
And oft will we seek in memory
The days that are past,
Far too joyous to last,
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity.

Then we'll sing to our old Trinity,
To our dear old Alma Mater, Trinity,
We're together to-day,
And to-morrow away,
Far away from our old Trinity.

—J. H. K. BURGWIN, '77.

History

IT IS ever the part of the senior historian to chronicle the sorrow of his class at leaving Alma Mater. What other emotion could we feel when confronted with the necessity of bringing to a close our four years of careless, happy, college days? Four years, they say—nay, four months, four weeks, it seems, so quickly has the time flown. Before the entering freshman eternity seems outspread—the senior is counting the precious sands in the hour-glass. The graduate of to-day would scarcely recognize the verdant freshman of four years ago, yet the gap seems brief when bridged by memory.

To give a list of our achievements in detail might be of interest, but we have no wish to add a hundred pages or so to the already well-filled Ivy. We have played our part as best we could, and have shirked no duty. Noughty-one has been more than well represented in every branch of college affairs throughout the course, and the honor of being a "squeezer class," seems to an impartial observer no more than just. In athletics we have been consistently prominent, and it was the football team of our senior year which made one of the very best records ever made by a Trinity team, incidentally defeating our old rival, Wesleyan. In the various other organizations and clubs we have worked hard and with good result, while in society no class has ever presented such popular and successful "fussers." In scholarship we are not behind, although it is perhaps just as well we are to graduate so soon, for the constant "raising of the standard" is making "the survival of the fittest" mean more than it ever did in Christian Theism.

In freshman year we studied, were hazed, made the teams and clubs, and were glad when we could at last smoke the handsomest class pipes ever seen on the campus.

In sophomore year our mishaps as hazers were due more to our inexperience and leniency than to the "fiendish spirit of barbarous atrocity" usually assigned to sophomores by newspaper readers and other weak-minded mortals. In addition to an extraordinary number of cuts, the Faculty generously gave the whole class a six-weeks' vacation in the pleasantest season of the year.

As juniors we filled several places usually given only to seniors, and our Ivy marked a new era in the publication of college annuals. In our last two years we have controlled the football and track teams and the Tablet.

Senior year saw us assume the administration of every other department of college activity, and that we have performed our duties well is generally conceded. We have remedied old evils and put new life into four or five nearly defunct, but deserving organizations.

Such is our record in four years of college. Let us be glad that we can always be proud of it. As a class of undergraduates, we are about to leave the old walls that seem just now to hold nearly everything that is dear to us on this earth; but our love for Trinity cannot die. We shall return again and again, and shall show by our active interest and unflagging efforts in the cause of our college that "Novus ordo sæclorum" is the motto of a class of men who will always be Trinity men—loyal, earnest Trinity men—till the last card in the game of life is played.

History

A WISE man has said that each new responsibility is a prop to virtue. How remarkably well propped, then, our virtue became when the dignities and responsibilities of upper-class men fell to our lot. Yet, we undertook our new duties so naturally and gracefully, that the lower classes entertain for us a respectful cordiality—the higher class envy.

To be very candid, we really do feel considerable pride in our record, for there is no department of college life in which we are not represented most creditably—athletic, scholastic and social traditions have received no small impulse from '02. Our athletic supremacy is due not to a single all-round man, but the combined efforts of a number of good men. In the 'Varsity teams we have distinguished representatives. Our class teams are champions. What is true of athletics is also true of scholarship. We have no one man pre-eminently above all others, but, rather, we congratulate ourselves on having so many names on the honor roll, and on the closeness of the competition. Even the chapel services feel our influence, for we play as well as sing an important part in the service.

As for our social distinctions we can mention the Germans led by '02 men, and with great complacency we point to the Junior Promenade, and challenge any one to show us one more successful or more thoroughly enjoyable.

We feel pride, too, in our members, who, acting as managers of different teams and organizations, have brought such credit to the college as well as the class.

Although last, but not least, we are glad to say that always our class has been united—all men shoulder to shoulder—on good terms one with another.

All these good things our bitterest opponent will admit, despite his depreciating remark that we are Naughty-two.

Our history would not, however, be complete without mention of our younger brothers, the Freshmen. We are proud of them, and expect them to win the enviable honor of being second to '02 in general excellence. We commend their daring in giving a banquet in the city, and we also express our enjoyment of the affair.

Although proud of our record, we shall not rest on it. In the true Trinity spirit we are preparing for greater things.

History

“SOME are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them.” Of no class can this last phrase be more literally true than of the class of 1903. Two years ago, when we first came to college, we looked just the same as any freshman class, for our hidden greatness was concealed by a veneer of verdancy too thick for the eye to penetrate. “Naughty-two’s” patient efforts, however, gradually wore this away, so that at the end of our first year we began to shine forth in our true light.

Then, at the beginning of the sophomore year, we suddenly realized our position. We were no longer members of that lowest order of humanity—freshman, and, in consequence, the class entered chapel on the opening day of the present college year with a dignity which was marred only by the fact that some of our number at first absent-mindedly resumed their old places in the freshman seats. After the services, however, we reinstated ourselves in public opinion by the hearty way in which, co-operating with the upper classes, we welcomed the new class into our midst, holding out to each one a helping hand, occasionally varied by a helping foot.

At the bulletin board we showed that our pugilistic faculties were by no means undeveloped, “Naughty-four” bearing strong testimony to the fact. Later in the evening we magnanimously conceded the push-rush to the freshmen, fearing that if we took this, as was at first intended, the entering class would become discouraged at the succession of defeats, and leave college.

Then came the under-class meet. True, it was excellent practice for the sophomores, but, nevertheless, a considerable waste of time. In one or two events the freshmen came along to see how the trick was done, but modestly dropped back at the finish and allowed the sophomores to win. Needless to say, we won the meet, securing nearly all the points.

There were two other athletic contests with the freshmen, but of them it is difficult to write. Various accounts of the football game have come to the ears of the chronicler, but none have much authenticity. Several think the sophomores won, others are inclined to a different opinion, but as there was no moon and the night was cloudy, the truth about the game will probably never be known. In the basketball game we were “out of practice,” and were unable to get our “regular team” together. Consequently we were somewhat outclassed.

The time for the Freshman-Junior banquet at last came, and, by our secret method, we discovered the fact. The matter was considered for some time, and it was finally decided that the pursuit of freshmen at a temperature of 20° below zero was beneath our dignity, so we told them to go and have a good time, as we would not disturb them. Such kindness could only emanate from truly great natures.

Briefly, this is what we have done during our Sophomore year. We fold our arms and await your applause. Thank you.

But, seriously, although our achievements have not been as great as we would have had them, yet we have tried to fill our place as part of the college, and it is during the sophomore year that it is hardest to do this rightly. At times the class has been censured for courses which it has taken, but it has, nevertheless, adhered to its own opinion of the right, and it is hoped that, in carrying out the motto, non instrenui laboramus, we have not labored altogether in vain for the advancement and glory of our Alma Mater.

Class History

THE strength of a muscle depends upon the quality, not the size of the muscle. A small, hard muscle has more strength in it than a large flabby one. Some people's muscles do not grow large by exercise, but they undoubtedly grow strong. It is quality, not quantity, which counts.

So it is with our class. Although few in numbers, we are great in strength. We proved this at the bulletin board, where, although outnumbered, we succeeded in putting up our challenge to the sophs. It was immediately torn down, but we think that we did well to hold it there even for an instant against such odds.

In the push-rush we had only nineteen men, but so determined were we to win that the large number of sophomores was completely outclassed, and once again our quality stood the test against quantity.

After the push-rush, although we threw out a few taunts after the sophs during the march down town, we remembered our Sunday School lessons of early years, and seeing that our enemies were thirsty, gave them to drink.

On the following Monday night several of us again showed the kindness of our hearts. Some sang, some recited poetry, others danced. Some did all three. And all this was for the amusement and pleasure of the class of 1903. In certain instances we men of 1904 rose from our beds, whither we had betaken ourselves at ten o'clock, and did our best to entertain our visitors, whom we did not wish to disappoint since they had climbed three flights of stairs expressly to see us. We here gave proof of two well-known facts: That a man can be kind as well as brave, and that he can love his enemy.

In the inter-class meet we met defeat for the first time. But perhaps this was policy on our part, for, had we won in that also, our class might not now be as large as it is. Yes, undoubtedly, it is a wise plan to humor an enemy now and then, lest he resort to deep and underhand scheming and thus harass you.

At football we showed up very well. Five men in the class made the team, and, although other men were substituted now and then, each man played three or more college games, one man playing through the entire season. Our class football team played well against the sophomores, and, had it not been for the darkness and the opportune arrival of a man not in college, who seemed to have appeared especially for the occasion (for he has not showed up about college since), we would undoubtedly have beaten them. As it was, the game turned out a tie.

We have two men who have played in games on the 'Varsity basketball team, and one is such an excellent player that he is greatly missed whenever he is unable to play. Our class team showed itself to be very much superior to that of 1903.

It is not our place to say whether the banquet to 1902 was a success. We leave that to the Juniors. One thing we can say, however: As far as the sophomores were concerned, it could not have been more successful.

With such a fine record for only a part of our first year, who can doubt that the possibilities of our class are greater than those of many a larger one? Let us follow the advice of St. Paul, and, "reaching out unto those things which are before," "press toward the mark."

The Year

THE truth of Shakespeare's words when he said, "All the world's a stage," is nowhere more clearly manifested than when they are applied to the smaller unit known as the college world. Even this space may be so large that the words lose their full meaning, and we must again descend to the sphere of the smaller colleges before the full significance is appreciated. Here the interpretation becomes an easy matter, and the statement at length gains its full importance. Now may be clearly perceived the different parts played by each man. The stage upon which the actors make their entrances, and from which they take their exits, is ever before us.

Upon this stage another act has been almost completed, and the question is once more presented, of how have the players fulfilled the expectations of the audience?

The football team was the first to appear, and deserved an encore. With the possible exception of two games, the team did as much, and a little more than was expected of it. Although thrown into some confusion by the disabling of their captain, and the shifting of men into other positions made necessary by it, the team quickly pulled together, and in the great battle of the year, by a beautiful exhibition of pluck, endurance and good management, the men fought a good fight and crowned themselves with the wreaths of glory.

The basketball team was the object of no little criticism, and that mostly of an unfavorable character from the college body. Much opposition arose to the miscellaneous nature of the games played. Beneath this feeling a philosophical sentiment exists. Since the season seemed to be composed mostly of defeats, it seemed to the college body that it would be a better policy to limit the games to contests with similar organizations of other colleges, at whose hands defeats might be accounted for, rather than enduring defeats from teams for which we feel like asking explanations.

When, however, the team at length was opposed to a rival worthy of its steel, it showed of what stuff it was made, and ended the season with honor.

Trinity week was a success, despite the fact that there was a large attendance of Junior week weather. A feature, however, hitherto enjoyed by the guests during that week, was missing this year, and if it is a permissible question, we should like to ask what has become of the Jesters? That formerly much respected organization has not been in evidence this year.

The musical organizations have been of very ordinary ability. The Glee Club gave the customary concerts about the city, but did not afford much satisfaction, either at home or abroad. Maybe its "sweetness was wasted on the desert air." The Mandolin Club was much weakened. Was it because of lack of material in the college, or because the material in college did not come out?

The Indoor Meet took place on the evening of the 22nd of March, and was a successful event from every point of view. The meet was well attended and the events generally well contested. As an item of information, merely to those not in a position to have known the result from the first, it may be well to state that the meet resembled that of last year in one respect—it was a Junior event. Merriam, 1902, won the McCrackan Cup, and the college record for the fence vault was broken by Hill, 1902.

The baseball season brightens as it draws nearer, and if, when the season is over, its "blessings brighten as they take their flights," we shall have cause to brighten once more the campus in the manner of by-gone days. There is good material and some rivalry for places on the team. This is encouraging. In competition we trust. It is earnestly hoped that the prestige of the college will be upheld in the face of many a powerful opponent.

Thus has passed another period in our too limited allotted span of college life. With the poet we say :

The radiant morn has passed away,
And spent too soon its golden store.

College life, as it recedes into the past, becomes of such stuff as dreams are made of. It is not, however, rounded with a sleep, but lives on to cheer our later years with recollections of the time when we gathered "Neath the Elms."

Voice of the Wind

Wind of the wold, tell of the Spring,
Zephyrs light ; tarry and sing,
Tell me in whispers, murmurs, sighs,
Secrets of birds and butterflies,
Sing low, sweet voice of the wind to me,
Your song of rose and honey bee.

Wind of the sea, tell of the deep,
Spray kissed breeze sing while I sleep,
And visions of the mermaid land
Will smile on me on every hand ;
Sing low, sweet voice of the wind to me,
Your song of ships and billows free.

Wind of the wood, sing of your bowers,
Sigh of night tell of the flowers
That lift their incense to the sky,
And kiss you as you pass them by,
Sing low, sweet voice of the wind to me,
Your song of bud, and leaf, and tree.

Shakespeare on Exams.

“ A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse ! ”

“ God forbid the hour. ”

“ Cheer up your spirit ; that’s my fortune, too. ”

“ What means this passionate discourse ; this peroration with such circumstance ? ”

“ First lean thy aged back against my arm, and in that ease I’ll tell thee the answer ”

“ Nothing, nothing, I can think of nothing ! ”

“ Witness all sorrow that I know thee well, yet I cannot remember thee. ”

“ A middlin’ hard week is just passed. ”

“ I failed in everything. ”

The World of the Sea

The morning mists as they clear away
Show far out on the sea,
The nations' ships as they sail along
In the light of a summer day.

The white sails gleam upon the light,
While some show dark and worn,
And others dip in the wash of waves
As the gulls on their course are borne.

Now, many men from foreign climes
Are here within our ken,
They are brothers all by a common fate,
Though they ne'er meet again.

So our life's pathways cross and twine
With all whom we may meet ;
We are brothers all by the hand of God
Till at last in our graves we sleep.

—FRANCIS E. WATERMAN.

A Betting Trio--With Results

ONE Sunday morning, chapel having been dismissed, three men were lounging around the fire-place of a room, engaged, to all appearances, in occupying the tiresome interval between chapel and dinner with arguing various questions, which at any other time in the week would have been equally as tiresome.

Jim Cooper, Birdie Nelson, so nick-named in consequence of a bluff he tried to put up in his freshman year to the Professor of Natural History, and Harry Powers were intimate friends. This fact the entire college appreciated. It was a friendship which had developed within the last three years, and deepened by the trials of college life.

These were the three men who were now sitting around the fire-place, engaged at this particular moment in discussing a question of evident interest to all. The question had attained a distinction among them as being one of the very few subjects upon which the three were divided in opinion. Cooper, after emerging from the obscurity of his freshman year, had gone into society, and, become, to use the expressive term of the college, a "fusser." Nelson looked upon such a pastime as utterly frivolous and wasteful, both to money and time. His sentiments he was now expressing. "A man must be a genius to succeed in society. It is exactly the same case as with life in general. Whatever a fellow finds he has a special aptitude for, that he should follow. We don't, however, stop to consider that question, and so do not make as much of a success as we otherwise might. It is the same with society. You go into it without knowing whether you really have any special ability. But I enjoy watching you men, you are so easy. You tumble into society thinking you will make a hit, yet it would often be a surprise to find out just the place you occupy in the estimation of others. Now, your fair companions, you see, must play their cards, and that is the only reason why some men exist at all. If their positions were reversed many men would be staying at home evenings. As it is, if a man can only attain the mark of being 'good enough,' he will serve to act as an escort, and, having served his purpose, will go his way, and be no more thought of."

"Well, what do you think of that sermon, Powers?" asked Cooper. Now, Powers was one of those easy-going characters, whose motto was, "Taste life's sweet moments as they glide," and take them as they come.

He had never been seen running to chapel or recitations. He had accepted invitations out two or three times, but did not care to talk when he did not feel like it. In response to Cooper's inquiry, he drawled out his opinion that he thought Nelson had better clean his spectacles, as he was looking through a glass darkly. "Well, now," said Nelson, renewing the attack, "tell me what did you do at the dance last Tuesday evening when you said you had such a delightful time?"

"What did I do?" repeated Cooper, scornfully, "What in the world do you suppose I did? Do you suppose I spent the time making mud pies?"

"Look here, Cooper," said Powers, "if you are going to get dirty, I am going to leave. I have turned over a new leaf."

"If you are going to leave in that fashion I would suggest," said Nelson, "that you carefully store away a large supply for time of need. The chances are against any new leaf staying clean long in this region."

Powers had gone to the door, but had gradually made his way back. "Decided to stay with us a little longer?" asked Cooper.

"Yes; I have something to propose to you fellows. There is no use in sitting there arguing this society matter any longer. You will both believe as you did before. This is my proposition, which will, at the same time, test the truth of your statements, and afford us a little amusement. Let us make an agreement that whosoever shall show that his sentiments were not sincere by getting married, shall, because of his insincerity, thereby manifested upon a convenient night as soon after the announcement as possible, suffer the consequence of his crime by treating the others to a supper, the magnificence of which shall be measured by the girl he wins. The better the impression she makes on the other two the easier the third one will get off, for we shall consider that he was in that case less susceptible to the governing force of reason."

"Suppose we cannot afford it?" inquired Cooper.

"Afford it, may I ask with what sort of a conscience will you say 'with all my worldly goods I thee endow' if you are not able to furnish two gentlemen of gentle appetite as we possess to one supper? If by any mishap she should have the funds you must change the service that she may ask the important question: 'Who is going to pay transportation charges?'" [The fellows who do not have any other cares. I left that as a loop-hole through which Jim might escape.]

"Well," inquired Powers, at length, "is it a go?"

"Sure," replied the other two, and the three went to work upon an appropriate document, which, when it had been drawn up and signed, was put carefully in Power's desk, he having been appointed custodian. Soon afterwards they went to dinner, and everything else accordingly was forgotten.

Some years had passed. The three friends were now widely separated and engaged with success in winning honors for themselves. Cooper had become a promising young lawyer in the East. Nelson was in business in Cincinnati. Powers was mining in Colorado. They had kept up a desultory sort of correspondence, and were perfecting a plan by which they could hold one of those meetings—dear to all grads.—a reunion. By that curious working of the mind, by which there flashes upon us, often at the worst possible moment, the recollection of a deed done long ago and gone from us until some incident presents it again to us, one of the men was soon to be reminded of his college days. Nelson one day had occasion to cross the Ohio River and spend some time in Louisville. At a concert which he attended with a friend, he met a girl not considered pretty in that land of beauty, but possessing for him that vague, indescribable attraction, which holds a man with firmer grasp than any other feeling. Business rapidly grew in importance on that other side. So it continued until some of his friends began to worry about him. They could not but suspect something was wrong, and yet they could not believe themselves. Nelson had ever affirmed such indifference to women that they could not but wonder more and more. At length two of his friends determined they would settle the matter and find out what he was about. They learned when he was to make another business trip. Going over on an earlier boat they waited, and when at last they saw him get off a later boat, they followed him as he went up the street. Keeping him in view they followed him until, at last, to their outward amazement and inward joy, they saw him enter the home of one of the leading society girls in Louisville. Now, they were at a loss to know what to do. For some time they stood there debating. Then curiosity got the better of them, and, cautiously, they made their way up to the house, which stood back from the street. At last, by skilfull manœuvering, they obtained positions where they could catch barely a glimpse into the cozy room, in which their non-society man was sitting very near and engaged in a most earnest conversation with a girl who impressed them both with the same sense of her attractiveness. They almost fell over when they saw him suddenly turn towards her with a look of earnest entreaty, which lasted some moments, when suddenly he raised the girl's hand to his lips and as suddenly dropped it, raising himself erect with an air of pride and also of surprise. Listening most intently they could faintly hear his answer when, in reply to the girl's look of astonishment, he said: "I have won a girl but lost a supper."

My Smoking Partner

A friend I have who fain would feel
My every joy and pain,
Who would my inmost secrets steal,
And all my thoughts would gain.

His interest in me who could guess?
His purpose no one knows.
For my own part I must confess
My wonder grows and grows.

One reason only can I say,
Which may this knot adjust,
'Tis that my friend is made of clay
While I am made of dust.

The College Bluff

When recitations won't be learned,
By those whose minds are more concerned
With thoughts of ease and all such stuff ;
A ten or nine may oft be gained,
And good repute may be retained,
If we can talk, and talk, and bluff.
But Profs., alas ! however wise,
Whate'er of learning most they prize,
Nor of it seem to have enough ;
Can not or will not—forsooth—see
The fact that's plain as plain can be,
The college lives but on a bluff.

—HOWARD R. WHITE.

Between Two Flames

I took Rose to the play,
And we fell in with Lou,
Then the deuce was to pay,
I took Rose to the play,
For I'd told Lou that day
That I hadn't a sou,
I took Rose to the play,
And I fell out with Lou.

ORITHYIA

A GREEK LEGEND

High stood the caverns on Mount Hæmus bold,
Within them lurked a man forlorn and sad—
King Boreas, the god of North-east wind.
Full heavily with garments was he clad,
As on his throne high-pedestaled he sat
And pondered in his heart a secret plan :
“ I am alone within this world,” he sighed,
“ Right weighty is to me this grievous ban,
No love has shared with me my kingly couch,
No love has twined her arms about my form
Save in a dream, but dreams ! ah, me ! alas !
Are too unreal to comfort my life’s storm.
The bridal-songs I hear in happy Thrace
As upwards soar they in the evening air ;
I watch from this my home the bridal-dance,
And would myself to bridal-couch repair,
Yet I remain unmated and unloved,
For all my aims at love are baffled soon.
Betimes I fear lest ’tis the Fates’ decree
That I shall live forever out of tune ;
But yesterday when I was wandering
About the broad-spread plains of Athens old,
Where snowy temples bask beneath the sun,
And King Erechtheus sways his sceptre gold,
I spied the maiden Orithyia.
I know no poet who could paint her eyes,
For they were bluer than the sapphire deep,
And sunnier than all the Grecian skies.
Her slender form is like the willow young
Which overhangs a dark, unhampered pool.
Her features are a study for my eyes,
For they are chiseled with a perfect tool.
Half hidden by her veil-like vesture pale,
As sometimes is the moon with feathery mist,
Her bosom with its apple-blossom tint
Lies in its silken sheen by beauty kissed.
But when I sought my Orithyia
To come and cheer this distant mountain cave,
To serve my bed and bear me children strong,
That might become good warriors and brave.
With gentle mien spake she these crystal words—
‘ Let but one stream spread over me its wave,

And let that stream be pure Illissus clear
 In which I bathe with other maidens dear.
 Its golden sand gives to my naked feet
 A pleasure that is infinitely sweet.
 I love my Athens with its flowery dells,
 Its well built walls and towering citadels.
 Nay, King, I will not leave my home for Thrace,
 Hie now away, thy airy flight retrace.' ''
 When to himself, for no one else was nigh,
 King Boreas these words had uttered low
 As fingered he his flowing, shaggy beard,
 His fierce rage in his heart did wilder grow,
 And upward raised he then his mighty form,
 And slowly paced he through his cavern's gloom
 As thunder sounds ere comes the break of storm.
 Then clinching furious his hairy hand,
 He cried, " Why hast Zeus given me this power
 Of mighty force so irresistible ?
 Why did I hesitate to cull the flower—
 The lovely flower Orithyia ?
 I ever gain my ends by mortal force,
 I will not hesitate to grasp my Love,
 And I will risk the pangs of deep remorse."'
 He spake no more but bound upon his feet
 His winged oak-wood sandals light and fleet.
 Down, down from high Mt. Hæmus did he wing,
 And men in Thrace did shudder with the cold.
 Down, down to Athens did he hastening come
 In silence as a knave or robber bold.
 Without a care, sweet Orithyia
 Was straying calmly 'long the flowery field,
 Plucking the daisies which she loved so well,
 And now and then some favorite rose concealed
 Within her vesture by her bosom warm.
 A low tune was she humming as she strayed,
 As listless as the song of honey-bee
 That pauses often in the sunny glade
 Some clovers to caress. A moment past
 And Boreas had seized his gladsome prize,
 And girded firm his arm about her form.
 A startling cry ! A glance into his eyes,
 Then fell the maiden Orithyia
 Swooning upon his breast in deathly fear,
 Up mounted then the God of North-east wind,
 And closer to himself his pale nymph dear
 He drew. Then kisses came in endless glee ;
 His love awoke to drink of ecstasy.

—DANIEL HUGH VERDER.

Far-off Land

Come with me my pretty wee wee
To the shores of far-off land,
Where the sand man lives with the nimble sprites
That are known as the drowsy band ;
Where they deftly weave on the looms of sleep,
A veil for our weary eyes,
Through which we peer till the morn awakes,
And calls the scatter-shade skies.

Come with me my darling wee wee
To the land where dreams are made,
Where the drowsies paint on the wall of night
In colors that soon will fade ;
And the songs they sing make the forest ring,
While they scurry thro' elfin bowers,
To pluck thee a wreath of nectared breath,
To sweeten my darling's hour.

Close your eyes my angel wee wee,
In the land where the drowsies play,
Till the dawn wind stirs and they scamper off
To the shades at the end of day ;
And wander long in far-off land
My own, my precious wee wee,
For all too soon will the vision fade
In light of the yet-to-be.

—WILLIAM TYLER OLCOTT, '96.

Earth's Worship

When the golden sunbeams lengthen
On the meadow side or lea,
Where the clover blossoms tremble
At each breeze or busy bee ;
Listen then to Nature's callings
Uttered by her creatures free.

Let their whisperings echo sweetly
Thro' your heart, till you may learn
How 'tis Nature giving praises
To our God ; then may you turn
With these thoughts your heart o'er-pondering,
And give praises in His name.

The Library is open from 10 A. M. to 12 M., and from 2 P. M. to 5 P.M., also from 7 to 9 P. M. with the exception of Wednesday and Saturday evenings. On Saturday the hours are from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M.

Since the date of the last annual report there have been added to the Library 897 volumes, 335 pamphlets and 12 maps. Of these, 173 volumes were purchased, while the pamphlets, maps and 724 volumes were presented. Besides these Professor Riggs has sent in a list of 157 volumes in the Chemical Laboratory of which the Library has hitherto had no record. They have now been properly accessioned and given library numbers.

The total strength of the Library at the present date is, therefore, 40,-736 volumes, 26,335 pamphlets. The Duplicates now amount to about 3,700 volumes and 6,200 pamphlets.

The total number of volumes taken out during the year has been 744, an increase over last year of 349 volumes. The following table gives the circulation by months, and shows the character of the books drawn :

LES TROIS CHATS NOIRS

VERSE BY
ALBERT L. WYMAN, '02.

ILLUSTRATED
BY JAMES A. WALES, '01

LAY ON THE BOUNDS OF DREAMLAND'S SHORE,
I SWEETLY DREAMED—DID SWEETLY SNORE:
KERRUP! KERRUP! KERRUP-RUP-RUP!
BUT THREE BLACK CATS STOOD ON THE FENCE,
AND FOUGHT WITH FELINE VIRULENCE!

KERRUP! MEE-OW! KERRUP! WOW-WOW!
THEY SPIT AND SPAT, AND ROUGHLY SWORE,
THEY FRACTURED MY MELODIOUS SNORE!
MEE-OW! KERRUP! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!
ONE RAISED HIS VOICE, AND BRAZEN SAID:
"YOU'RE A BLACK, BLACK CAT WITH AN UGLY HEAD!"
MEE-OW! MEE-OW! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!

THEN LOUD ALL THREE TO THE CHORUS ROSE—
THE FUR DID FLY; THEY USED THEIR TOES!
MEE-OW! MEE-OW! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!
I GOT ME QUICK MY LITTLE GUN,
AND VAINLY WISHED FOR THE MORNING SUN!
MEE-OW! MEE-OW! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!
I SENT EACH SWIFT A MERRY PILL,
ONE SURE TO CURE AND LIKE TO KILL!
MEE-OW! MEE-OW! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!
NO MORE I HEAR THAT CHORUS NOW
THE NIGHT WITH TURMOIL FIERCE ENDOW:
MEE-OW! MEE-OW! MEE-OW-WOW-WOW!
FOR CATS SING LOW AND SILENT GROW,
WHEN BURIED SNUG BENEATH THE SNOW!
KERRUP! KERRUP! KERRUP-RUP-RUP!

TRINITY COLLEGE

THIS ILLUSTRATION shows the principal building of Trinity College, 653 feet long, in the English Secular Gothic style. At right angles with it, on the south, are the observatory, the new Hall of Natural History, and the Jarvis Laboratories for Chemistry and for Physics. To the north of it are the Gymnasium, houses of the President and Professors, and Chapter Houses of the Fraternities.

Below the College Campus to the east, and within three minutes' walk, is the spacious Athletic Field.

In beauty of situation, healthful conditions of life, and equipment for its special work, the College is not surpassed.

The college has distinct courses in Arts, in Science, in Letters and Science, and in Letters.

The Faculty includes eleven professors, eleven instructors, and five lecturers.

Among the Elective studies within the respective courses, there is scarcely a single important subject for which adequate provision is not made.

Properly qualified candidates not desiring to pursue the whole studies of any course are allowed as Special Students to pursue certain subjects, receiving certificates of satisfactory work.

The Library contains 40,000 volumes. Generous contributions of the Alumni are making possible a rapid addition to its resources.

A new Reference Reading Room lighted at night by electricity is open not only during the day, but also five evenings of the week.

The Jarvis Chemical and Physical Laboratories have every equipment for the most advanced work.

The new Hall of Natural History contains Biological Laboratories provided with the most modern appliances.

There are about fifty scholarships for the aid of necessitous students. The three Holland Scholarships, yielding each $600 per annum, are awarded to the three best students in the three lower classes respectively. The Russell Graduate Fellowship of $400 is awarded biennially in the interest of higher graduate study. Prizes to the amount of $500 are also awarded to undergraduates for success in the work of the various departments.

Two examinations for admission are held at the College in each year, the first in the week preceding the Annual Commencement, viz.: June 21-23, and the second in September, immediately before the beginning of the Christmas Term, September 17-20.

For Catalogues, Examination Papers, or information, apply to the President or to the Secretary of the Faculty.

Wherein Love Triumphed Over Sect

IN a county of one of our Middle Western States dwell a sect whose industry has made that county one of the most prosperous districts in that region. They are the followers of the Amish Faith, a form of religious belief which had its origin in Europe about 1625. These people are distinguished by many peculiarities. They wear no buttons on their clothes. They are forbidden to sit for a photograph. They are not allowed to have wall paper with figures on it in the houses, nor are pictures allowed there. Idleness is one of the cardinal sins with them. The church arranges all marriages. The bride has her husband selected for her or the groom his bride. In making these selections the church pursues the policy of producing averages by interbreeding extreme natures.

In this community there lived a young man about 20 years of age and a girl some two or three years younger. As may be supposed from the industry which characterized the whole people, the parents of both enjoyed a comfortable degree of prosperity. They had given their children the limited educational advantages which the community afforded, but considered that education sufficient. The girl, as she had increased in years, had developed a beautiful character, and she seemed to be above her state and suited for a higher sphere of usefulness than that in which she was placed. The history of the boy had not been pleasing. He was a wild, reckless fellow, of whom no good was predicted—a rolling stone who did not seem contented unless he was engaged in some dare-devil scheme. At length, when he became of such an age as to be able to support himself, he was given some land—for in the practice of their religion everyone is bound to assist the others—and started in the right way. Now came the subject of marriage. The church, recognizing the character of the man, could imagine no better way of carrying out their law of equality than by uniting the two, and by such means attempting to lead him to a more useful life. This, accordingly, was done. No objection was made on either side. She was bound to obey, and he did not care.

Trouble soon set in. Her attempt to reform him by constantly preaching to him the teachings of the church were utter failures and rendered him more irritable. He could not settle down to the quiet life of the people, and soon conceived the idea of moving into the West and there engaging in mining. He made many attempts to induce his wife to accompany him, but in vain. She declared that her first duty was to the church, and she refused to leave.

Some weeks after this proposal had been made the community was astonished by the report that Matthew Wade had disappeared. Inquiry was made at his home. His wife had not seen nor heard anything of him for three days. It was learned that he had disappeared in a similar way once or twice before. Though diligent search was made for him no trace could be found. His wife worked the little farm herself, and gradually he was forgotten.

Toward the close of a beautiful summer day some years later a man stepped off the train at the little stone station of Freemont. His appearance had excited no little interest among his fellow passengers. He was well, though not loudly dressed. His

During all the long struggle out of which this situation has developed, and amid the many schemes devised to attract public attention and favor to something else than life insurance, the attitude and position of THE CONNECTICUT MUTUAL has never been doubtful. ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ ❁ It has held to the cardinal facts: Life Insurance is for the protection of those dependent on man's life; their dependence makes it his unavoidable duty. complexion was that bright red which tells of much exposure to the weather. His face told of a character of self-possession and easy confidence acquired by close acquaintance with the world. His manner was somewhat rough, but toned down by a hard life. Such was the man who descended from the car and walked without apparent hesitation directly to the one little hotel which the town boasted. It was the same man who, early next morning, after some inquiries, made his way to a little white cottage which stood some distance up the road. He was on the point of ascending the stairs, when the door opened, and the woman, now the owner of the small farm, stepped out on the porch. She started as she saw a man standing before her with an expression of amusement on his face. For an instant they looked at one another, before she exclaimed, "Matthew!" "Why, Flora, I have for some time been congratulating myself that I would not be recognized by you, and so might have an opportunity to play the hungry tramp act, which I can do very well." "Ah, no," she replied, laughing. "I recognized you, though you have changed very much." "Yes," he said, thoughtfully, "I guess you are right." "Will you not come in, anyway, and have some breakfast?" "Thank you very much; but first I want to tell you my purpose in coming here. My mining venture has been more than successful, and I have made some money. I came back here to ask you if you do feel that you can give me an opportunity of atoning for early sins." "Matthew, I have been thinking, since I last saw you, of my position and duty both to you and the community. The last time you asked me to go with you I could not see anything but my duty to the church. Now, however, I see that I have made a mistake. I owed you a duty as well as the church. Lately I had become very dissatisfied with my life here, and had almost decided to get rid of the property and move away. I—" "No more," he broke in. "I will save you that trouble. We will go away as soon as possible; but now I think I can take care of that breakfast."
